

Martin Schreiber, Clemens Zimmermann (eds.)

Journalism and Technological Change

Historical Perspectives, Contemporary Trends

Campus Verlag
Frankfurt/New York

Contents

Preface	7
Introduction: Towards a New Perspective on Journalism and Technology	9
Clemens Zimmermann/Martin Schreiber
“Neither good, nor bad; nor neutral”: The Historical Dispositif of Communication Technologies	30
Andreas Fickers
Temporalities of News: News and Speed from the Early Modern Era to the Present	53
John Nerone
From Handmade to Technology-driven Journalism: Changes and Developments in Research, Writing, Editing, and Makeup	80
Jürgen Wilke
The Interpretive Turn in News	111
Kevin G. Barnhurst
Contemporary or Commercial? The Impact of Innovative Image Reproduction Techniques on the Imagery of Nineteenth Century Mass Media in Germany	142
Rita Gudermann
Eyewitnesses? The Visual Depiction of Events around 1900	165
Jens Jäger
Mobile, Networked and Digital Technology: Implications for Journalistic Work	185
John Pavlik

Journalistic Quality as Crowd Wisdom? What Journalists Think about Criticism on the Social Web	205
Tobias Eberwein
Quality in Journalism Reconsidered: The Limits of Realism	225
Mitchell Stephens
User Participation and Professional Journalism on the Internet: Theoretical Background and Empirical Evidence	244
Christoph Neuberger
Changing Technologies, Changing Journalistic Epistemologies: Public Participation, Emotionality and the Challenge to Objectivity	264
Karin Wahl-Jorgensen
Notes on Contributors	284
Index	289