

Contents

Foreword by Dennis E. Showalter — V

Preface — IX

Acknowledgements — XVIII

- 1 Western Warfare as a Crucible for Constructions of Race and Gender — 1
 - Scope and Conceptual Frameworks — 1
 - The Origins of Race — 3
 - What is Race? — 9
 - What is Gender? — 13
 - Gender Historiography — 17

- 2 Race and Gender in the Nineteenth Century — 21
 - Introduction — 21
 - Gender and War before 1865 — 22
 - Women in Arms: Gender Inversion and Martial Identity — 27
 - Nineteenth Century Race Theory (1800–1860) — 33
 - The Mexican War and the American Civil War (1846–1865) — 37
 - Gender in the Second Half of the Nineteenth Century — 43
 - Nineteenth Century Race Theory (1850–1900) — 45
 - Anti-Semitism before 1900 — 50
 - Conclusions — 55

- 3 Race, Gender, and Warfare during New Imperialism — 57
 - Introduction — 57
 - British Concepts of Empire: Gender Identity — 64
 - British Imperialism in India and Africa — 68
 - American Exceptionalism at Play: Race and the Native American — 75
 - Theodore Roosevelt and “The Strenuous Life” — 80
 - The Spanish-American War — 83
 - Pursuing Empire in Asia: The United States and the Philippines — 90
 - Western Gender and Racial Exceptionalism in China — 96

- 4 Gender and the First World War — 101
 - Introduction — 101
 - Overview — 102

- Gender Relations and Roles before the First World War — 103
- Wartime Nationalism and Masculinity in Europe's War:
1914–1916 — 113
- The Death of Elan: The War's First Two Years (1914–1915) — 114
- The Rape of Belgium: The Nexus of Atrocity and Propaganda — 121
- Deflating Nationalisms and Destabilizing Masculinities,
1916–1918 — 125
- Women and the War: The German Home Front, 1916–1919 — 127
- Regulating Gender and Sexuality in Wartime — 133
- Morale and Discipline in the French and British Armies — 138
- The Male Body as Contested Terrain: Treating Wounds and Trauma — 142
- Homosociality and Same-Sex Relations in The First World War — 146
- Conclusion and Epilogue — 149
- 5 Race and the First World War — 151
- Introduction — 151
- Race, War, and European Identity — 152
- Empire and War – The British Empire — 155
- Empire and War – France — 159
- Race and the American Expeditionary Force — 169
- Race and War: The Ottoman Empire — 176
- Race and War: Germany — 179
- Conclusion — 184
- 6 Race and Gender on the Eastern Front and in the Pacific War — 187
- Introduction — 187
- Setting the Context – Planning for Operation Barbarossa — 190
- Wilhelmine and Reichwehr Antecedents for German
Military Excesses — 197
- The Effects of Nazi Ideology on the Military — 200
- The Nazi Way of War – Racialized Conflict without End — 202
- Pretexts for Racial and Gender Identities in Asia and the Pacific — 207
- American and Japanese Racisms during the Asia-Pacific War — 221
- Conclusion — 230
- 7 Gender and Race on the Homefronts in the Second World War — 233
- Introduction — 233
- Gender Relations between the World Wars — 234

	The Segal Model for Wartime Gender Integration —	239
	The Soviet Union —	242
	Germany —	245
	The United States —	246
	The Segal Model and Its Conclusions —	250
	Race and the American Military in Wartime, 1941–1945 —	252
	Last Thoughts on the “Greatest Generation” Mythology —	266
8	Race and Gender in the United States during the Early Cold War —	269
	Introduction —	269
	Gender and Race Between the Wars, 1945–1950 —	269
	The Korean War: Fighting on Racial and Gender Fronts —	276
	Gender, Sexuality, and Race on the American Home Front, 1950–1960 —	285
	Conclusion —	296
9	Race and Gender During Decolonization —	297
	Introduction —	297
	The Historiography of Decolonization, Race, and Gender —	298
	Race, Gender, Insurgency, but not Marxism in Kenya —	305
	Race, Gender, Insurgency, and Ideology in Vietnam —	310
	Race, Gender, and Sexuality in the U.S. military during Vietnam —	319
	Conclusion —	324
10	The Future of Race and Gender in Warfare —	325
	Recent Trends in Historiography —	327
	Sexual Assault and War —	327
	Genocide and War —	338
	LGBTQ Personnel and Military Service —	342
	Contemporary Considerations: Racial Intolerance and Sexual Assault in the US Military —	346
	Whither Gender and Race in Future Wars? —	361
	Where Should the Scholarship Go From Here? —	365
	Bibliography —	369
	Index —	397