

CONTENTS

List of Illustrations	ix
Preface	xv
Acknowledgements	xix
1. In the Land Where Tomorrow Was Already Yesterday	1
A New Horizon for a New Society	4
Deploying a New Temporal Structure	18
Maintaining the New Temporal Framework	30
2. The Lord's Day, the Worker's Day	46
Breaking Down the Conventional Time Cycle	50
Giving New Meaning to an Old Rhythm	60
On the Success of the Project	70
3. Constructing the Idea of the Common Good	79
Relationships between Public Actors	82
Conflating Common and Private Interests	96
Closing the Gap between State and Society	102
4. Complaining, Talking about Yourself	113
Socialist Vivre-Ensemble	117
A 'Space of One's Own'	130
Reconquering the Private Sphere	141

5. 'One Day, Our Streets Will Be a Festival!'	157
Forming a Socialist Community	160
Creating Social Ties	196
Maintaining Social Ties	213
Conclusion	244
Reinventing Space and Time	244
From Control to Autonomy in Space and Time	250
Disenchantment	255
Continuity and Rupture	257
Notes	259
Selected Bibliography	303
Index	316