ACKNO

It has been a pleasure to write this book in collaboration with so many marvelous people. Thanks go to our contributors: to the editors and generous scholarly exchange partners whose discussions that had been going on in the pages of the journal, took on new life face-to-face in the chapters in the volume you are reading. The chapters have been read, discussed, and revised by members of our contributor community. I have shared and sources with one another. My work graces other venues also. I am grateful for the German-Jewish filmmaking in the past and present in important ways. These colleagues include: Sara Hake, Sara Hall, Todd Harkin, Jonathan Skolnik, Joel Westerdahl, and others at Berghahn Books.

Thank you to all the members of the community at Berghahn who have eased our work. Thank you to Chris Chappell, Mykelin High, and others for their support, good nature, and efficiency.

Our home departments and colleagues are possible in large and small ways, in part through their support for conference and research. Thank you to the University of Cincinnati, the Charles Phelps Taft Center for Film and Media Studies, and others.

And of course, we both are grateful to our families and colleagues who support us with their unconditional love.
