

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Various individuals and institutions have contributed to the writing of this volume. The editor wishes to thank their former lecturers, the School of History, Culture and Art Studies at the University of Jyväskylä and the Department of History and Ethnology at the University of Helsinki, for their support and encouragement. He is also grateful to Professor Jouko Paasikallio (University of Helsinki) and Professor Jarmo Laitinen (University of Helsinki) and two anonymous referees who have kindly shared their expertise in colonial questions. Thanks are due to the editors of the Journal of Finnish Studies who have polished the language of the chapters. By financing research projects, the Academy of Finland has supported investigating questions of colonialism and enabled the writing of many of the chapters (1, 2, 5, 7, 8, 9, 12) in this volume. Finnish Heritage Agency, Finnish National Library, Finnish National Archives, Nordiska Museet, and the Finnish National Archives provided illustrative material for this volume.

CONTENTS

1	Finns in the Colonial World	1
	Raita Merivirta, Leila Koivunen, and Timo Särkkä
Part I State, Nation, and Colonialism in Finland
39	2 Wisdom of the Oppressed: Finnish Colonial Complicities in the Age of the Russian Empire	41
	Pekka Rantanen, Petri Ruuska, and Timo Särkkä
67	3 Finnish Parliamentarians' Conceptions of Imperialism and Colonialism, 1917–1995	67
	Mika Suonpää and Matti Välimäki
95	4 Settler Colonial Eyes: Finnish Travel Writers and the Colonization of Petsamo	95
	Janne Lahti
121	5 Nation-Building and Colonialism: The Early Skolt Sami Research of Väinö Tanner	121
	Jukka Nyysönen

Part II Colonial Encounters in Finland	145
6 "Queensland Cannibals" Encountered in Finland (1886): Locally Rooted Visions of Exhibitions of Colonized People Leila Koivunen	147
7 Colonialism, Race, and White Innocence in Finnish Children's Literature: Anni Swan's 1920s' Serial "Utisasukkaana Austraaliassa" Raita Merivirta	171
8 Encountering Colonial Worlds Through Missionary Maps in the Late-Nineteenth-Century Grand Duchy of Finland Johanna Skurnik	199
Part III Finns' Colonial Encounters Abroad	223
9 From the Eastern Front to the Western Frontier: The Transimperial Life of a Finnish Worker During the First World War Aleksi Huhta	225
10 Photography and the Religious Encounter: Finnish Missionaries' Representations of the Owambo, Namibia Napandulwe Shiweda	249
11 "Did You Really Have a Place in the Boer War?": Colonial Conflict and the Contested Production of "Finnish" Nationality, 1899-1908 Wm. Matthew Kennedy and Chris Holdridge	277
12 The "Pioneer Men": Making of Finnish Settler Identity in Southern Africa Pre-1914 Timo Särkkä	303
Index	331

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Gunlög Fur is a Professor of History at Linnaeus University, Sweden. Her research focuses on colonial encounters, indigenous history, gender, and colonialism and history.

Chris Holdridge is a Senior Lecturer in History at North-West University, South Africa. His research interests include global history and British imperialism, especially the South African War of 1899-1902 and nineteenth-century settler colonialism in South Africa and Australia.

Aleksi Huhta is an Academy of Finland postdoctoral fellow at the University of Helsinki's Department of Cultures. He studies Finnish migration history in the context of late nineteenth and early twentieth-century global imperialism.

Wm. Matthew Kennedy is an international, imperial, and legal historian of European colonial worlds in the late nineteenth and twentieth centuries. He is a Marie Curie Postdoctoral Fellow at the University of Sussex. His research focuses on the intersections of international law and ideas and practices of governance in late nineteenth and early twentieth-century European empires in Africa, South Asia, and the Pacific Ocean world.

Leila Koivunen is Professor of European and World History at the University of Turku. Her research interests include the history of European imagination and representation of the non-Western world, the culture of display, and the processes of knowledge formation.